The commander of the armed guard of an American merchantman has reported to the navy department that delphia Ledger. hls crew sank a submarine after the Germans had made an unsuccessful attempt to sink the ship.

An agreement which will result in an immediate reduction in the price of coal was reported by the Illinois coal operators after a four-hour conference with Governor Lowden. The announcement was made by Sam'l Insull chairman of the state council of defense. A statement was being prepared which outlined the settlement reached.

The date for calling the first increment of 200,000 men into the ranks of the national army may be changed from September 1 to 4. September 1 is followed by Sunday and Labor Day, and beause of the heavy railroad traffic at that time, due to holiday excursions, draft officials fear the work of transporting the men to cantonments might be scriously interfered with.

Both the British and French armies facing the Germans In Flanders have again struck hard blows at their antagonists and have again been rewarded with further gains in the line of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria. While the fighting occurred only on isolated sectors, it seems evident that the heavy artillery duels in progress all along the front from Nieuport to the Franco-Belgian border are the forerunners of a resumption of the big allled offensive which the rain and the accompanying mire stopped almost at its inception more than a week agu.

Nervous Fatigue Suffered by Patient Result of Unnecessary Strain of Expecting a Hurt.

That curious fear experienced by many known as "dentist fright" is altogether unnecessary, according to

"The fatigue which results from nn hour or more of this dentist tension is too well known to need description," says Annie l'ayson Call, the well-known teacher of nerve training. "Most of the nervous fallgue suffered from the dentist's work is in conse quence of the unnecessary strain of expecting a hurl, and not from any actual pain inflicted. The result oblained by insisting upon making yourself n dead weight in the chair, if you succeed only partially, will provo this. It will also be a preliminary means of getting rid of the dentist fright-that peculiar dread which is so well known to most of us."
So well known indeed to some of us as to shut out the sunlight for weeks before the fatal date, the dread increasing steadily, till by the time the chair is reached a state of tension has been utlained that precludes the possibillly of letting ourselves "go dead." But, says a well-known neurologist, one can drop all this by a little effort, and say to himself, "I will not ery till, I am hurt." In fact, he cannot only nequire the ability to become dead weight in the chair but will finally give no more thought to the dentist's appointment than to a dato at

PURE OXYGEN LIKE POISON

When It Is Applied at Pressure of Several Atmospherea Warm-Blooded Animal Dies Quickly.

There is a seeming incongruity in speaking of oxygen as a poison; yet scientists say that it has long been known that if a warm-blooded animal be submitted to pure oxygen at a pressure of several atmospheres it will die as promptly and surely as if it were in an atmosphere of pure ni-trogen. It is pointed out that even exposures to lesser pressures of oxygen over a considerable time are often attended with fatal results, the most familiar of which are severe iaflammation of the lungs, thus leading indirectly to death.

Professor Karsner has attempted to define more accurately the possible pathologie effects of this gas, which is being used freely as a therapeutic ageat, as a prophylactic against asphyxia in anesthesia in the industries, and ia the exigencles of submarine or aerial performances. His studies show that atmospheres coataining from 80 to 96 per cent of oxygen under normal barometric pressure usually produce, in animals, in the course one or two days, congestion, and finally a pneumonia, probably of irritative origin and to be described as a "fibrinous broncho-pneumonia."

Service.

And the question always is whether men shall serve, or merely be unhappy because they cannot serve in a certain way. If the path that they would like to tread is-through no fault of theirs -closed to them, it is for them to open another path, and walk steadfastly therein. They may never win fame, never gain the applause of the world, and mny even be eriticized by the foolish for seeming to shirk, but they will have the approval of their own consciences, and the good oplaions of nli those whose opinions are worth anything. Gifts, by their very nature, are not things that can be acquired-though may be cultivatedfor they are things given. If they are not given, there is and can be no responsibility for failing to use them .-

The Crown Prince's Amazing Adventure

SUPPOSE that none of you have ever heard the name of Thyra Adeiheid von Kienitz?

She was n funny little deformed person, aged, perhaps, seventy, widow of the great General von Kienltz, who had served in the Franco-German canipalga, and who, before his death, had heen acknowledged to he as great u strategist as Lord Roberts.

Countess von Klenitz was the daughter of a certain Countess von Borcke, and after fiving for many years in retlrement in her picturesque old schioss, perched on a rock not fur from the famons wine district of Berncastei, on the Mosel river, hecame suddenly seized with an idea to re-enter Beriin

With this view she rented a fine house not far from the Leichtenstein bridge and enriy in 1911 commenced a . series of wildly extravagant entertalaments with a view, as it seemed to me, to nitract the more modern and goahead section of Berlin society.

Oue afternoon, seated by the crown prince as he drove recklessly his great cial, with yellow hair and short stat-

"Look, Heitzendorff! Is she not like Von Kienitz?"

"Yes, her figure is very similar," I admitted.

"Ah l The old woman was introduced to me the other night at Bismarck-Bohien's house. Himmei! Wint n freak! Have you seen her wig?"

I repiled that I had visited once or twice at the Stulerstrasse and that the company I had met there were certainly amusing. I mentioned some of their names, among them that of young Von-Ratibor, Major Gersdorff of the Death's Head Hussars. Van Heynitz of the Konigsjager, a well-known men about town, his friend Winterfeld, together with a number of ladies of the very ultra go-nhead set. At this his highness seemed highly interested.

"She certainly seems a very curious gether. old person," he laughed, "Fancies that she's but twenty-five, and actually had the audacity to dance at Blsmarck-Bohlen's"

New Arrival at Court,

Judge my great surprise when, about six weeks later, Frau von Alveneben, the pretty grand maitresse of the court of the crown princess, stopped me'lu one of the corridors of the Marmor palace and, drawing me aside. whispered:

"I have news for you, my dear count. We have a new arrival "at court-Frau Yellow-Wig.

She saw that I did not follow her. "Countess von Klenitz—a friend of yours, I helleve.

"Friend of mine !" 'I echoed. "I've only heen in her house three or four times, just in a crowd, and out of cu-

"Oh, la la! Well, she has told the crown princess that you are her friend and, in brief, has entirely fascinated her imperial highness."

What the grand maitreese had told me was perfectly correct, for three eral von Oertzen, the fat old inspector days later a dance was held, and as I entered the room I saw amid that gay assemblage the widow of the long-forgotten military hero talking quite fa illarly with her imperial highness. To my utter amazement, also, his majesty the emperor, in the gay uniform of the Third regiment of Uhlans of Saxony, advanced and amlied gracious-upon her as the bowed as low as neumatism and old age allowed.

The fascination which the shrill-olcod old woman exercised over came more rife than ever, especially when, a week later, it was announced that she had actually been appointed n lady-in-waiting.

The crown prince, too, soon became on friendly terms with her, and muny times I saw them chatting together as though exchanging confidences. Why?

"I can't make it ont," declared Von Behr, the chamberiain du service, to me one day two months later. "The old woman has the most complete conirol over her highness. Because she was averse to the Journey we are not going to Norway this year. Besides, since her appointment, she has succeeded in plotting the dismissal of the Countess von Scheet-Plessen,

A Conversation in Italian.

One evening I went to the countess' house in the Stnierstrasse to a dinner purty, at which there were present the crown prince, Admiral von Spee from Klei and Von Ilberg, the emperor's doctor, together with the old Dake von Trachenberg, who held the honorary and out-of-date office of grand cupbearer to the emperor, and the eternal "Uncle" Zeppelin. With us were a number of ladies, including their serene highness, the Princess von Endolln and the Da hous you Rathor, both ladies of the court of the kaiserin, and several others of the ultra-

After the meal there was a small dance, and about midnight, after waitzing with a pretty girl, the daughter of the Baron von Heintze-Weissenrode, we strolled together into the fine winter gurden, with its high paims, its plashing fountains and its cunningly secreted electric lights,

Two persons were approaching somewhere behind us, conversing in Italian-u man and a woman.

"Hush!" I whispered mischievously. "Listen! Do you know Italian?" "Alasl no," was her reply.

J'ou? I did not answer, for I had already recognized the voices as those of our hostess and the crown prince. Next moment, however, my companion's quick ears caught that unmistakuble squeaky voice,

"Why, it's the countess!" she ex-

ilis highness and the little old ladyin-waiting seated themselves out of sight a short distance away and continued a very confidential discussion In an undertone in the language in which, after Germau, I happen perhaps to be most proficient.

The pair were discussing somehedy named Karl Krahl.

"I saw the emperor today," dechred Mercedes car along the Bismarckailee the old woman, in her sibilant Italian, In the direction of Potsdam, we passed undoubtedly so that no one should unan overdressed old woman, very artifi- derstand, for Italian is seldom spoken at the forester's house to chat alone in Germany. "His majesty shares my lews now, though he dld not do so nt tirst. Indeed, i was very near being dismissed in disgrace when I thist broached the affair. But, fortunately, he now knows the truth and sees the advantage of-well, you know; eh?"

"Certo, contessa," replied the crown weil. "I quite foresee the peril and the force of your argument."

"llow shall we act?" asked the old woman. "It remains for you to devise n plan. At any moment matters may approach a crisis. One can never account for the confidences exchanged by those who love each other. And, remember, Krahi Is in love."

The crown prince grunted, but as several couples entered at that moment the pair broke off their confidentlai chat and, rising, went out to-

Wito was this Karl Krahl?

I searched various directorles, lists of persons engaged in the government offices in the Wilhelmstrusse, the Liepzigerstrasse and Unter den Linden; I consuited the director of Berlin police, Von Jagow; the well-known Detective Schunke and Heinrich Wesener, assistant director of the secret sorvice of the general staff; but uohody knew Karl Krahl. There seemed to be no record of him anywhere.

An Unexpected Caller. In October I accompanied his imperial highness to Ballenstedt, the heautiful schloss in the Hsrz mountains. Here once or twice each season the crown prince's habit was to invite a few of his most intimate chums to shoot in the forests of Stecklenberg and the Lauenberg, and along that curious sandstone ridge known as the Teufeismauer, or "Devil's Wall."

The guns consisted of five well-known officers from Berlin, together with Doctor Zeising, the master general of forests, and Lieutenant Gengeneral of cavalry; As usual, we all had a most enjoyable time.

On the third day, after a champagne inncheon taken at the forester's little house at Neue Schenke, we were about to resume our sport. Indeed, all the guests had gone outside, preparing to go to their allotted stations, when the head forester entered and, addressing the crown prince, said:

"There is a man to see your imperial highness and refuses to leave. He gives his name as Karl Krahl."

A LETTER FROM THE CROWN PRINCE'S PERSONAL ADJUTANT TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX, POSSESSOR OF THE SECRETS OF EUROPE.

Venent Nadon, pae Morei-sur-Loing, Seine-et-Marne, February 10th, 1917.

My dear LeQuenxi

I have just finished reading the proofs of your articles desceibing my life as an official at the imperial court at Polydam, and the two oc three small errars you made I have duly corrected.

The gross scuadals and willy intrigues which I have related to you were many of them known to yourself, for, as the intimate friend of Lidsa, the ex-crown princess of Saxony, you were, before the war, closely associated with many of those at court whose names appear in elastly associated with many of these prices.

The revelations which I have made; and which yea have eccorded here, are but a titbe of the disclosures which I could make, and if the world desires more, I shull be pleased to farnish you with other and even more startling details, which you may also put into print.

My service as personal adjutant to the German crown prince is, happally, at an end, and now, with the treachery of Germany against civiling the computation in the computati then, smiling affubly, so clever was he, most erratic. We knew that if the like his imperial fother, in the con- whim took him he would perhaps go continent of his rent feelings-he repiled: "Oh, yes-Krahi! I recollect. Yes,

I will see him here." Next moment the person whom I had heard discussed so strangely in the little old woman's heautiful winter garden was ushered in. lie was dark-haired, aged about twenty-cight, I judged, with smail, shrewd black eyer, dressed in a wellcut suit of gray country tweeds, and, but for his German name, I should have taken him for an Engilsh tourist, one of those familiar objects of the Harz in peace tline.

crown prince, affably, as he grasped his visitor's hand. His highness did whose name I alone knew? not often offer his manicured hand to others, and at this I was greatly surprised. "The forester did not know you, of course. Well, I nm very pleased to see you. Have you come straight

"Yes, your highness. I went first to Berlin and learning that you were here, I thought I had better lose no

"Quite right," laughed his highness, who, turning to me, said: "Heitzendorff, will you tell the others to go on that I am detained for an hour on state business, and-and that I will join them as soon us possible. I will find you in the woods, on the left of Quedilnburg road, before one comes to the Wurmtai. Apologize for me, but the deiny is inevitable. I have n conference with Herr Kruhi,"

The Crown Prince Disappears.

While his highness remained behind with the mysterious Knrl Krahi, we went out among the hirds and had the young man, whom I had long endeavored in vain to trace, caused me considerable wonderment. Who was that young fellow in whom the little regarding the affair. old countess seemed to take such deep prince, who speaks Italian extremely and peculiar interest? What was his offence I that she, with the crown prince, should concoct, as it seemed to me, such a plot as that I had partly overheard?

That there was a woman in the case I feit assured, but her mame had notbeen mentioned and I had no suspicion of whom it could he. I renlized, however, that something important must be in progress, otherwise his highness, devoted to sport as he was, would uever have given up the hest afternoon to consult with that stranger iu grny tweeds.

The foresters and beaters had come with us, as the crown prince had, at his own request, been left alone with his mysterious visitor.

. After a couple of short beats we arrived at the spot on the forest rond to Quedlinburg, a most romantic and picturesque gorge, where his highuess had arranged to meet us, and there we sat down and waited.

A full haif-hour had passed, yet the head forester, who was keeping a lookont along the road, dld not signal his highness' approach.

"I wonder what can have detained him." him?" remarked Von Oertzen, the inspector general of cavniry.

I explained that a straage young man had come to the forester's house. An hour went past. The light would soon fade and we, knowing "Willie's" utter disregard for his appointments, at last decided to continue the shoot, leaving one of the foresters to tell his highness the direction we had taken. The crown prince did not, however, join us, and darkness had fallen ere we returned to the forester's house. Of his highness there was no sign, a fact which much surprised us. In the room wherein I had left him, his gun and green Tyroleso hat were lying upon n chair, and the fact that all the cars were still ranged outside showed that he had not driven back to the cas-off in an opposite direction, or trudge back to the custle with utter disregard of our natural anxiety.

Lights were ill and we enjoyed cigars awaiting Knof's return. In an hour he was back with the news that nothing had been heard of his highness. Soon after we had left that morning, however, a young man in a gray suit had called and seen the mafor domo, who had directed him where his highness might be found.

Upon Eckardt-the commissary of police responsible for his highness safety-the onus rested. Yet, had he not been sent out with the party, as "Come in, Kari!" exclaimed the his highness had expressed to me a wish to be left alone with the stranger,

While we were discussing the most judicious mode of action-for I scented much mystery in this visit of Kari Krahl-one of the party discovered, lying upon the fedge of the window, a lady's small and rather elegant handbag of black moire silk.

"Halioa!" I cried, when he held it up for inspectiou. "This reveals to us one fact-a woman has been here."

I opened the bag, and within found a smail lawn handkerchief with a coronet embroidered in its corner, a tiny torioise-shell mirror and four one-hundred-mark notes, but no clue whatever as to its owner,

The mystery was increasing hourly. but the gay party, knowing "Willie's" susceptibility where the fair sex was concerned, only laughed and declared that his highness would assuredly turn up before the evening was over.

Truth to tell, I did not fike the situation. His highness' disappearance was now known to lifty or so persons. beaters and others, and I feared lest some excellent sport. Yet the sight of it might get into the Berlin papers. With that object I called them together and impressed upon them that most complete slience must be maintained

Then Knof drove me alone back to the schioss. I wondered if his highness, wishing to get away unobserved, returning in secret there, had left me a written message in his room. He ind done that on one occasion before.

I dashed up to the siunii, old-world room which by day overlooked the romantic and picturesquo vailey, but upon 'the table whereat I had been writing early that morning there was nothing.

The Countess Von Kienitz. As I turned to leave I heard a footstep, and next Instant saw the little deformed old countess facing me. Her appearance quite startled me. Apparently she had just arrived, for she was in a dark blue bonnet and warm traveling coat.

"Ah! Count von Heltzendorff!" she cried in that squeaky, high-pitched voice of hers. "Is his imperial highness here? I must see him immediate-

"No, countess. His imperial highness is not here," was my reply. "This afternoon he mysteriously disappeared from the forester's lodge at Noue Schenke, and we are unable to trace

"Disappeared !" gasped the old lady, instantly pale and agitated. "Yes," I said, looking her straight in the face.

"Do you know whether he had a visitor' today-a young, dark-haired man ?"

"He had, countess. A man called, and saw him. At his highness' request I left him alone with his visitor at the forester's house. The man's name was "How do you know his name?" she asked, staring at me with an expression of distinct suspicion. "Because-well, because I happen to have learnt it some time ago," I' said. "And, further, on returning to the house we found this little bag in the room wherein I had left the crown prince. "Why l-a lady's hag!" she exclaimed as I held it out for inspection. "Yes," I said in a somewhat hard

"It certainly is not mine. I once bad a bag very similar, but mlae was not of such good quality."

"Are you really quite certain, countess?" I demanded. "Quite," she declared. "But why trouble about that bag while there is n point much more important—the safety, and whereabouts of his imperial highness?" she went on in a great state of agitation. "Teil me, count, exactly what occurred—as far as you know." I recounted to her the facts just as they have aircady been written down,! and as I did so I watched her face, noticing upon it an expression fuil of suspicion of myself. She was, it seemed to me, undecided as to the exact extent of my knowledge.

"How did you know that the young man's name was Krahi?" she asked, eagerly, "You had perhaps met him before-ch?"

The Search.

To this leading question I maintained a sphinxiike slience. That the little old woman who had so unexpectedly become n indy-in-waiting was playing some desperate double game I felt sure, but its exact import was still an enigina.

"In nny case," she said, "would it not be as well to return to the Nene Schenke and make search?' '

I smlied. Then, in order to let her know that I was acquainted with Itafian, the language she had spoken on that well-remembered night in her own conservatory, I exclaimed:

"Ahe! alie voite con gli occhi aperti si far dei sogni." (Sometimes one can dremn with one's eyes open.)

Her thin eyehrows narrowed, and with a shrug of her shoniders the old woman replied: "Dal fulso bene viene il vero male."

(From an affected good feeling comes real evil.) I realized at that moment that there was more mystery in the affair than I had yet conceived. His imperial highness was certainly missing, though the female element of the affair had become eliminated by my recognition of aily. her own handbag. She, too, had been in secret to the forester's house-but with what object?

Haif an hour later we were back at the little house in the forest.

The guests had all returned to the eastle, and only Eckhardt, the police commissioner, remained, with a forester and his underlings. Already search had been made in the surround-ing woods, but without result. Of his he bit his lip and then smiled granty.

imperial highness there was no trace In the long room, with its pltch-pine waiis, and lit by oil lamps, the oid countess closely questioned Eckingdt as to the result of his inquiries. But the police official, who had become full, of nervous fear, declared that he had been sent off by his highness, and had not since found any truce of him. He spoke of the little slik bag, of course, and attached great importance to It.

Within haif an hour we had reorgunized the heaters from the neighborhood and, with innterns, set out again to examine some woods to the east which had not been searched. About ten o'clock we set forth, the countess accompanying us and walking well, notwithstanding her age, though I could see that it was a fearful anxiety that kept her active. To the men with us every inch of the mountain side was familiar, and for hours we searched.

A Startiling Discovery.

Suddenly, not far away, a horn was blown, followed by loud shouts. Quickly we approached the spot, and Eckhardt and myself, as we came up, looked upon a strange scene. Close to the trunk of a great beech tree iny the form of the crown prince, hatless, outstretched apon his face.

Instantly I bent, tore open his shooting jacket, and to my great relief found that his heart was still heating. He was, however, quite unconsclous, though there seemed no sign of s struggle. As he had left his hat and gun in the house, It seemed that he had gone forth only for a moment. And yet we were quite a mile from the forester's house!

The countess had thrown herself upon her knees and stroked his brow tenderly when I announced that he was still living. By her actions I saw that she was filled by some bitter self-reproach.

With the lanterns shining around him—snrely a weird and remarkable scene which would, if described by the journalists, have caused a great seasation in Europe—the crown prince was brought slowly back to consciousness, until at last he sat up, dazed and wondering.

His first words to me were; That fellow! Where is he? That that glass globe!"

An hour later he was comfortably in bed in the great old-world room in the castle, attended by a local doctor-upon whom I set the seal of official si-

Yet, even to me, he declared that he retained absolutely no knowledge of what had occurred.

"I weat out quickly, and I-well, I then, with an artificial laugh, declared: don't know what happened," he told me soon after dawn, as he lay in hed." Strangely enough, he made no meation of the man, Karl Krahl.

Later on he summoned the Conntess von Kienitz, and for twenty minutes or so he had an animated discussion with her. Being outside the room, however, I was unable to hear distinctly.

Weil, I succeeded, by bribes and threats, in hushing up the whole affnir and keeping it out of the papers, while by those who knew of the incident it was soon forgotten.

Karl Krahl Again.

I suppose it must inve heen fully three months later when one evening, having taken some documents over to the emperor for signature at the Berila schloss, I returned to the prince's privato room in the palace, when, to my great surprise, I found the man Karl Krahl sented there. He looked very pale and worn, quite unlike the rather athletic figure he presented at the forester's house.

"If you still refuse to tell me the truth, then I shall take my own measures to find out-severe measures ! So I give you full warning," the crown prince was declaring augrily, as I entered so nnexpectedly.

I did not withdraw, pretending not to notice the presence of a visitor, therefore his highness himself beckoned the young man, who followed him down the corridor to another room.

The whole affair was most puzzilng. What had happened on that afternoon in the Harz mountains I could not at nii imagine. By what means had his highness heen rendered unconscious, and what part could the little old countess have played in the curious affair?

In about haif an hour the crown prince returned in a paipably had humor and, flinging himself Into his chair, wrote a long letter, which he nddressed to Countess von Klenitz. This he senied carefully and ordered me to take It at once to the Stulerstrasse and deliver it to her person-

"The countess left for Stockholm this morning." I was informed by the bearded manservant. "She left by the eight o'clock train and has aiready left Sassnitz by now." "When do you expect her to return?" The man did not know.

On going back to his highness and

"That infernal old woman has feft Germany and will never again put her foot upon our soil, Heitzendorff," he said. "You may open that letter. It will explain something which I know must have mystitled you."

I did so. And as I read what he had written I held my breath. Truly it did expluin much. What the Crown Prince Told Me. Imposing the strictest slience upon me, the crown prince then revealed how utterly he and the crown princess had been misled, and how very narrowiy he had escaped being the victim of a cunning plot to effect his death.

The little old Countess von Kienliz had, It seemed, sworu to avenge the degradation and dismissul of her son, who had been in the famous Death's Head Hussars. She had secretly traced the crown prince as author of a conspiracy against him, the underlying motive being jealousy. With that end in view she had slowly wormed her way into his highness' confidence, and Introduced to him Karl Krahi, a neurotic young Saxon who lived in London, and who pretended he had unenrihed a plot against the kalser himself.

"It was to tell me the truth concerning the conspiracy that Krahl came to me in secret at Bnilenstedt. He remained with me for haif an hour, when, to my great surprise, we were joined by the countess. The story they told me of the plot against the emperor was a very alarming one, and I intended to return at once to Berlin. The countess had left to walk back to the schloss, when presently we heard a woman's scream—her voice—and well both went forth to discover what was in progress. As I ran along a little distance hehind Krahl, suddenly what seemed like a tidn glass globe struck me in the chest and burst before my face. It had been thrown by an unknown hand and, on hreaking, must have emitted some poisonous gas which was intended to kill me, 'but which happily failed. Until yesterday the whole affair was a complete mystery, but Krahi has now confessed that the countess conceived the plot, and that the hand that had thrown the glass bomb was that of her son, who had concealed himself in the bushes for the purpose." Though, of course, I hastened to congratulate his highness upon his fortnnate escape, yet I now often wonder whether, if the plot had succeded, the present world-conflict would ever have and before dawn he had com-

Prospectors Overlook Many Deposits, However, Because of Unfamiliarity With the Metal.

The metal platinum so much desired in some of the chemical industries and for other purposes at the present is valued so highly that there is much interest in locating new sources for the production of this valuable element. At present there is undoubtedly a shortage in this country in metallic platinum and its salts, due to the fact that by far the largest amount of the world's platinuni comes from Russia. > The rooster does not help the hens to lay. He merely fertilizes the germ of the egg. The fertile germ in hot weather quickly becomes a blood ring, which spoils the egg for food and market. Summer heat has the same effect on fertile eggs as the hen or incubator.

INFERTILE EGGS WILL NOT BECOME BLOOD RINGS

After the hatching season cook, sell or pen your rooster. Your hens not running with a male bird will produce infertile eggs -- quality eggs that keep best and market best.

Rules for Handing Eggs on the Farm-

Heat is the great enemy of eggs, both fertile and infertile. Farmers are urged to follow these simple rules, which cost nothing but time and thought and will add dollars to the poultry yard returns:

- 1. Keep the nests clean; provide one nest for every four hens.
- 2. Gather the eggs twice daily
- 3. Keep the eggs in a cool, dry room or cellar.

This must be divided into three pe-

But there is no scientific evidence to show that this is necessary, says Popular Science Monthly. The human body is simply an assemblage of cells, which must be kept active, without being overstrained and nourished without being overfed, in order that they may be able to resist the attacks of microscopie enemies which cause disense and decay. Under favorable conditions these cells will live indefinitely without showing signs of age of loss of vitality. Therefore the concinsion is reached that the "three score years and ten" are not fixed by any natural law, but rather by the conditions nader which men live and by their personal habits. The athletic champlon. then, who lives under the best hygienle conditions and observes the law of temperance in all things and at all times, should be able to "sit tight" on his pedestal so long as he desires.

National Waste.

Five years of drumming into the han at the present time. The great public the tremendous wastes of fire earelessness has apparently had little effect. It probably will take n war such as the one into which the country is now plunged, with its measures of ness which has eost millions in money and countless lives. The extent of this waste is presented graphically by the actuarial bureau of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, which has just completed an investigation of 500,000 fires in the United States. The report lays 21.4 per cent of the blazes to strictly preventable causes, 37.9 per cent to partially preventable eauses and 40.7 per cent to unknown enuses, largely preventable. It is another lilustration of the uotorious fact that America saves at the spigot and wastes at the bung. Fire prevention and food economy in these days of national saving should go hand in hand. -Exchange.

Plumbago Mines.

Plumbago, Ceylon's most important mineral product, is known all over the world for its luster, jubileating, polishing and binding qualities. In appearance it is a strong black crystalline. There are now about 1,000 plumbago mines in Ceylon, including all the shallow pits, open works and deep mines. The depth varies from n few yards to as much as 700 feet. Most of the mines are worked by natives, the only important one controlled by Europeans being the Medapola. At the majority of the mines the only machinery used is the dabare. This consists of a long wooden barrel with handles at ench end. Round this a rope is given two or three turns, and a bucket is fustened to each end. It is worked by seven or eight men turning the hau-

"A FEW THINGS ABOUT SILOS"

A silo is a sure sign of thrift. Only the best farmers build them. They save 40 per cent. of a corn crop. Corn is now worth $9.00 per barrel. The stalks that produce a barrel of corn today are worth $3.60 if put into a silo.

When you allow these stalks to dry up on the hill for fodder you lose about $3.00 for every barrel of corn you produce.

You can't afford this awful waste. If you raise a $3.00 barrel corn crop you throw away $900.00 by not converting it the stalk insilage.

It behooves every man in every business to save everything in times like these. The opposite course is not only foolish but wicked, for the world's food and feed supply is wholly inadequate.

We offer first class silos with plain lugs as follows: 10 ft. diameter, 24 ft. high ...... $145.00 30 ft. high ...... 205.00 12 ft. We offer 5 per cent. off for cash. THIS OFFER GOOD AS LONG AS THEY LAST.
